Our Trackers

While I am on a roll I would also like to congratulate Sammy and all the trackers for the amazing work that they are doing. The tracking is by far the most distressing and time consuming part of animal communication. Well done Ladies.

Welcome to Tammy who has joined our tracking department and is doing exceptionally well. It's great to have you on board, Tammy.

Hunting, Breeding and Hand-Rearing Wild Animals

In the past I have often spoken about ways to help the wild animals. One way is to not support the hunting trade in any way. Don't buy leather, fur or any toys, key-rings or other articles made from either leather, fur or snake skin. Also not to buy shoes, handbags or belts made of leather. Its called "Shopping Consciously" - Being totally aware of what you are buying at all times.

If there is NO trade for these goods, there will have to be a drastic reduction in the senseless killing of our precious animals.

My next point- and I cannot stress this enough - Please boycott the "Touch a Cub" experience. A couple of things you should know about behind the scenes of touching a cub.

These cubs are bred specifically for the tourist trade. When they are only a few days old they are taken away from their mothers and hand reared. The mother will then come into Oestrus and be covered again to have another litter of cubs which will then be taken away yet again. This puts an enormous amount of strain on both Mother and cubs.

Once these cubs grow up into adult lions there is no place for them and they end up in various hunting facilities around the country.

Remember, a hand reared wild animal is far more dangerous than a "wild" wild animal. The hand reared animal has no fear of humans and relates humans to food as humans are the ones who feed them. An animal in the wild who has had no contact with a human will only hunt when hungry for food and will generally keep away from humans.

The other thing to be aware of about touching a cub is that so many people touching and interacting with the cubs is very damaging to the cubs energy field. Just think of all the different people with stress or illness of their own touching a precious little lion cub. The stress the cub feels damages its energy field and leaves it torn and unclean. This can result in disease manifesting in the physical body of the lion cub at a later stage so please be aware of what you are doing and the reasons why you have the need to do it. Be conscious of your actions.

I want to appeal to all of you - PLEASE make a few minutes time in your busy days to send protection and light to all the lions and other animals in hunting facilities especially the ones in the Free State. Remember that if we leave out the humans we will be clipping our wings. The humans responsible for the abuse and neglect of animals need to change from the inside so it is VITAL to send loving energy to all responsible if we are wanting to change the world and protect the animals.

Working in anger only spreads anger.

Working in love will spread love.

The more we focus on sending protection, the stronger the protection will become.

We can make a difference and we WILL make a difference.

Dog Show at Peels Farm

I recently had the most amazing experience. I was asked by Helen Taylor from the NDDF to be one of the judges at a dog show that she had organized in Peels Farm informal settlement in Kliprivier.

The NDDF run a vaccination, sterilization and feeding project. All the dogs taking part in the dog show had to either be sterilized or vaccinated to qualify. It is a brilliant incentive for the people living in informal settlements.

It was such an eye opener to see the good condition of the dogs as well as the close bond they had with their owners. The owners were just SO proud of their dogs and the dogs were SO proud of their owners.

Here are a few photos of the dogs with their companions. Everyone had so much fun.

The entire family brought these dogs along...

And this dog brought the children

This man really loves his dog

A proud and happy team

Our precious companions

Hi everyone from Sammy. I've recently been very aware of the amazing and wonderful role animals play in our lives. Watching my son play with our dog, and chuckling at night when I check on him and find him cuddled up under blankets and cats with the dog under his bed; to seeing my stepson arrive at weekends, from a home nearly devoid of animal company, to our house where he is swamped and loved by cats and dogs and his absolute adoration of the love they share with him.

It's a wonderful world we live in because we get to share it with amazing creatures.

Each species that we choose to share our lives with brings something unique and special to the relationship; different types of energy to balance, soothe, calm, awaken, and inspire; different needs to awaken compassion, nurturing, kindness and even assertiveness; and always, always, an ability to make us better parts of ourselves, if we choose to accept the opportunity that is offered.

What I feel we should do in return is take these same gifts and offer them to the humans around us, in the hopes that more and more people come to understand animals better and improve the care and respect shown to animals the world over.

Trackings

The last couple of months saw a surprising increase in the number of parrots (African Grey and ring-necked) we were requested to track and a great decrease in the number of cats and dogs. While this is only a reflection of the animals we are requested to track, and by no means an indication of the actual animals that go missing or walkabout every day, it is still fascinating to me how species seem to clump together in trackings - a trend we have often noticed over the years.

While doing a tracking, I asked a guide of the animal I was tracking, why this was so, I was told that each species brings with it unique and special tools and abilities to work with energy and the earth and humankind in different ways, and that each animal, missing or at home, uses these different abilities all the time, working behind the scenes towards the greater good of all.

In Memory of...

In memory of Meryl who helped us so much over the years with the trackings of so many animals. Our thoughts are with her family and dogs at this time of her passing, may they be surrounded by love, light and strength to help them with their grief.

Endangered Wildlife Trust (EWT)

This year we are supporting The Endangered Wildlife Trust (EWT) in their wonderful conservation efforts. Their main focus is the conservation of species and eco-systems, especially the endangered animals, and they have many projects on the go to fulfil this aim. Please take a moment to go to their website and have a look at the projects they are currently working on at www.ewt.org.za.

Next Workshops and Events

Our next workshops are two Basic Communication workshops, the first being held at the Johannesburg Zoo on the 25th June and the second is to held in Centurion on Sunday 3rd July 2011

The workshops at the zoo are always fun and a great opportunity to awaken your telepathic abilities with the help of the wonderful animals there. These workshops are always popular so book early!

The Centurion workshop is going to be held at the Palooza shop, Lyttelton Shopping Centre, on the corner of Botha Ave and Cantonments in Centurion. The shop is a wonderful treasure trove of gifts and goodies that are not the normal run-of-the-mill sort, so bring your purse with you, you may just find that special something for yourself or someone special to you.

Email Sammy at Sammy@butlerworldwide.net / Sammy@animalhealing.co.za for more info and booking forms.

Website

Our website is now in the design stage, and we are eagerly awaiting our first glimpse of its new look. We are still collecting stories for our website. If you have any stories relating to animal communication, animal healing or a funny story about your own animal friends, please let us know - we'd love to have them on the website.

Until then...
